

Dorchester Dec 8th 1787

Mrs. Hill,

Dear Madam.

While reading the frequent thrilling accounts of the sufferings and privations of the Britan refugees, I have felt moved to do something for their relief, and at the same time, desired to place my mite when it should accomplish the most good. Having read your letters, and seen the accounts of your mission in Greece, for many years, you have not seemed altogether a stranger to me, and I have taken the liberty of forwarding the enclosed

First of Exchange for £ 15, hoping it would not encroach too much upon your other duties, to disburse
it, among those famishing women and children, who have taken refuge in Athens, from the barbarities of the Turk.

I should be glad to know still more of the actual condition of these poor people.
Please write me, to the care of my husband, Martin L Bradford. Boston. Mass.

Respectfully yours
Abby C. Bradford.
